

“You cannot provide personalized service to LGBTQ+ people if you do not understand us or feel comfortable engaging with us.”
– Billy Kolber, HospitableMe

Thank you for taking the time to learn about our diverse communities, and for the effort to make everyone feel welcome. As we travel around the world, we’re inspired by the work that hospitality professionals like you do, every day. In this document, you’ll find a summary of current best practices, reference materials and key concepts that you can discuss with your colleagues. We hope the materials we provide here will help you continue on the path of inclusive hospitality.

If you are interested in additional resources for your team, colleagues or company, or you’re interested in scheduling a HospitableMe program in person or via interactive live video conference, or have a situation you need help with, email us to start the conversation. TEN STEPS TOWARDS A MORE INCLUSIVE WELCOME

1. Don’t make assumptions about your guests/visitors.
2. Follow guests’ leads on relationships and pronouns.
3. Proactively welcome LGBTQ guests.
4. Acknowledge non-binary guests’ needs (Bathrooms!)
5. Share knowledge of local LGBTQ venues/history.
6. Tone and body language are important.
7. Fix misinterpretations and mistakes with ease.
8. Focus on respect and kindness.
9. It’s okay to ask!
10. Foster diversity in your own organization and among your colleagues by being respectful and inclusive of them.

“If you leave here with nothing else, know it’s okay to ask.”
— Kenny Porpora, HospitableMe

USING GENDER NEUTRAL LANGUAGE

Gendered language excludes people who don't identify with the male-female binary. Gender-neutral language includes everyone. Use Gender-neutral language when speaking with groups and people you don't know. Once a guest uses gendered language with you, it's okay to use it back. So start with gender-neutral language, but adopt the language that guests use to describe themselves and their relationships.
